

Another CDS Excuse Debunked

The bottling companies like Coke claim that a Cash for Containers scheme will unfairly increase the cost of living!

We can show why this is a complete fallacy...

Many of the bottles we find are still partially full. If 10 cents was so critical to people then they would consume all the drink.

Based on the average cost of $3 per bottle, the remains left in these littered bottles far exceeds 10 cents.

Approximate money left in littered bottles

Plus let us not forget that Coke and Pepsi and Lion Nathan products are not part of the essential family budget and by themselves, should not factor into the cost of living at all!

BeachPatrol Australia Inc. www.beachpatrol.com.au
admin@beachpatrol.com.au